Two Negroes Start on Walk From

Elmira, N. Y., to St. Louis.

Two men will push a cart bearing the legend "The Louisiana Purchase Expostion. St. Louis Mo., May 1 to November 1, 1905," from Elmira, N. Y., to St. Louis in a tramp half way around the world. They are Henry Wilson and William Boggs, negroes, of Elmira. The cart will be loaded with literature and pictures relating to the coming World's Fair, They intend to entertain their audiences on the journey by introducing as a feature of their advertising pligrimage, buck and wing dancing.

Wilson and Boggs started last Saturday on their long tramp. After leaving Buffalo, they will wheel their cart through Ohio, striking Cleveland and Toledo and stopping at Chicago. From that point they will tour the State of Illinois until they arrive at St. Louis. From that point they will tour the State of Illinois until they arrive at St. Louis. From that point they will be for some time at the midwinter exposition in that city. From Charleston the tramp is to be taken up to New York, where a steamer will be taken for Ilverpool.

"On to London!" will be their cry. Crossing the English Channel, the pedestrians will make their way across France to Paris. Their steps will then be retraced to England. Ireland is to be visited before the return voyage. Elmira, N. Y., to St. Louis.
